The nutritional content of seaweed per 100 grams shows that it is rich in calcium and vitamins, which are highly beneficial to the human body.

Dried seaweed: Packed with Nutrition!

Fresh seaweed is great, but dried seaweed is easier to store and contains more concentrated nutrients, making it even more versatile. Let's take a closer look at its nutritional benefits:

- Iodine: Higher in iodine than fresh seaweed — essential for thyroid hormone production.
- Calcium: Richer in calcium, which plays a key role in maintaining bone health.
- Iron: Contains more iron, helping to prevent anemia.
- Dietary Fiber: High in dietary fiber, which supports digestive health and aids in dieting.

The nutritional components of seaweed are based on a 100g serving. Its high calcium and vitamin content make it especially beneficial for the body.			Protein 2.10 g	Moisture 88.80 g	Calcium 153.00 mg
Phos phorus 40.00 mg	Vitamin A 233.00 RE	233.00 RE 1,398.00 µg	Ash 3.90 g	Dietary fiber 4.75 g	Carbohy drates 5.00 g
